Welcome to Unit 3. We are in the middle of the course so we are now closer to being able to move to Ireland. However, there are still a lot of things to learn. Our teacher believes that knowing how to write a cover letter to accompany a CV when applying for a job is of the utmost importance. For this reason, we will have to differentiate between the formal and informal features of language or deal with language related to meetings or career advancement. Apart from this, we will also apply some previous knowledge and vocabulary we have learnt in the previous units and we will use official tools such as Europass. So, let's get down to work!

Aims

This unit aims at providing you with the necessary tools you that you understand professional texts.The main objective is that, at the end of this unit, you will be able to understand different kinds of oral or written texts related to the labour world: read newspaper articles about meetings at work and also read and understand the structure of a cover letter Apart from this, you will learn specific vocabulary about how to conduct effective meetings in English and how to talk about the future.

The activities you will go through in this unit will allow you to write a cover letter adapting its content to the kind of job you want to apply for and accompany it by a resumé using the European Union platform, Europass

In this section we are going to study the different ways to express future time in english. This is mainly useful to talk about what our plans for the future are or predict different things. This may look fairly simple. However, there are important differences between the tenses that are used for the future. Let's find out more!

Future Time

https://www.piqsels.com. grammar (CC0)

In the following chart you will find an explanation of some of the verb tenses which are used in English to express future time.

Future Simple

Will + Infinitive

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION
I will speak	I won't speak (won't = will not)	will I speak?
you will speak	you won't speak	will you speak?
he / she / it will speak	he/she/it won't speak	will he/she/it speak?
we will speak	we won't speak	will we speak?
you will speak	you won't speak	will you speak?
they will speak	they won't speak	will they speak?

USES

- Spontaneous decisions (taken at the moment of speaking).

(At the office)

Paul: "The phone is ringing. I can't anwer it now!"

Susan: "It's ok Paul. I'll get it"

- Predictions based on opinion but we have no evidence of the fact (usually with expressions like: *I think, I believe, I guess...)

I believe this course will help me

I don't think he will get the message

- Certainty in the future

The building will be redecorated but all the offices will be the same.

- Intentions and decisions

When I visit you at work , I think I'll get you some flowers.

- Conditional sentences

We often use will (or the contracted form 'll) in the main clause of the 1st type conditional sentences when we talk about possible situations in the future:

If you get the job, you will have to move to Italy.

Present Progressive

'be' (present) and verb + ing

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION
I am speaking	I am not /I'm not speaking	am I speaking?
you are speaking	you are not (aren't) speaking	are you speaking?
he / she / it is speaking	he/she/it is not (isn't) speaking	is he/she/it speaking?
we are speaking	we aren't speaking	are we speaking?
you are speaking	you aren't speaking	are you speaking?
they are speaking	they aren't speaking	are they speaking

USES

Sometimes we use the Present Progressive to express Future Time.

- Plans and arrangements: when you are preparing something or have a plan and you are making arrangements so that it is accomplished

Next Monday, I'm travelling to Berlin for my new job (that means I have everything ready to move to Berlin)

I am having a meeting with my new boss tomorrow

What are you doing next weekend?

be going to

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION

I am going to work	I am not going to work	Am I going to work?

He/she/it is going to work	He/she/it is not going to work	Is he/she/it going to work?
We are going to work	We are not going to work	Are we going to work?
You are going to work	You are not going to work	Are you going to work?
They are going to work	They are not going to work	Are they going to work?

USES:

- Predictions : we use "be going to" to predict something that we think is certain to happen or which we have evidence for now.

I am going to be promoted next month because I have worked a lot over the last year

- Plans and Intentions: we use "be going to" to talk about future plans and intentions.

She's going to be a professional dancer when she grows up (She has the intention of becoming one)
I'm going to look for a new job next month.

Present Simple

POSITIVE	NEGATIVE	QUESTION
I work	I do not/don't work	Do I work?
You work	You don't work	Do you work?
He/she/it works	He/she/it does not/doesn't work	Does he/she/it work?
We work	We don't work	Do we work?
You work	You don't work	Do you work?
They work	They don't work	Do thet work?

USES:

- Timetables or fixed schedules

What time do you start work tomorrow?

I start work at 8.00 tomorrow

- To refer to events in the future which are certain because they are facts

Her birthday falls on a Friday next year. (a known fact about the future)
She has her driving test next week, does she? (a fixed arrangement)

SUMMARY

	PREDICTIONS	PLANS	TIMETABLES	SPONTANEOUS DECISIONS

WILL	(no evidence, based on opinion) I believe this course will help me			A: That bag is too heavy! B: I will help you with that!
BE GOING TO	(evidence) I am going to be promoted next month because I have worked a lot over the last year	(PLAN/INTENTION) I'm going to look for a new job next month.
PRESENT CONTINUOUS		(PLAN + ARRANGEMENT) I am meeting may new boss tomorrow
PRESENT SIMPLE			I start work at 8.00 tomorrow

Fernando Braña Asensio. Adam (CC BY-NC-SA)

In this vocabulary section we are going to study some useful language related to meetings at the workplace.English is considered to be the main language in the field of international business. To thrive in today's competitive workplace, individuals must enhance their proficiency and fluency. Thus, meetings play a crucial role in the modern work environment, which needs the development of communication skills.In the following guide you will find how to master the appropriate phrases, language use, and conversational tone during business gatherings is crucial for advancing in one's career.

By honing these skills, you will boost your capacity to lead meetings and deliver presentations in the workplace. The following conventions might come in handy.

Self-Introduction

Initiate the meeting by extending a warm welcome to your attendees and introducing yourself.

Begin with cordialities, using expressions like:

- "Good morning / afternoon"
- "Let's begin/start/ kick off"
- "I extend a warm welcome to all present"
- "I would like to welcome everyone"
- "Now that everyone is here, let's begin"
- "I appreciate everyone taking the time to join us today"
- "I would like to thank everyone for coming today"

Following the greetings, introduce yourself by stating:

- "I am [your name]. I aim to keep this meeting succinct, understanding everyone's busy schedules"
- "I am [your name] and I will keep this meeting brief as I know you are all busy people"
- "I am [your name] and I have organized/arranged this meeting because…"

Guiding a Meeting in English-Participant Introductions

For fruitful discussions during the meeting, it is imperative for attendees to acquaint themselves with each other. Individuals are encouraged to share their name, position within the company, and reasons for attending to guide the meeting discussions effectively.The meeting facilitator can prompt introductions by saying:

- "Let's introduce ourselves in turn, [name], why don't you start?"
- "Let's quickly go around the table and introduce ourselves – please mention your name, role, and purpose of attendance"

Establishing the Agenda

Similarly, it is critical to commence the meeting by articulating the agenda clearly and outlining the primary objectives.

Define the objectives using phrases such as:

- "I have convened/called this meeting in order to…"
- "Our goal today is to address/talk about/discuss…"
- "We have [number] items on the agenda. Firstly, …"
- "Today, I intend/would like to outline our strategies for…"

Assigning Action Points for Completion

Conclude the meeting by summarizing the tasks to be accomplished before the subsequent gathering. Use the following phrases to delegate action points:

- "[Name], could you finish these action points before our meeting next week?"
- "Prior to/Before our next meeting, I expect/would like [action point] to be completed for discussion"
- "By the next meeting, we should have/will have [action point] underway"

How to interrupt a discussion politely

Whenever you find the need to add to a discussion without speaking over others, consider using these respectful phrases to interrupt or ask for clarification:

- Apologies, but just to clarify…
- Pardon me, I didn't catch/hear/get that. Could you please repeat it?/Could you please say it again?
- That's a great point, [person's name]. How about also considering [action point]?
- From our department's perspective, it's a bit more complex/difficult/tough. Let me explain"
- Apart from this, you can politely interrupt using phrases like:
- Excuse me for interrupting.
- I hadn't thought of it that way before. How does it impact [this point]?

Posing Questions

There are various ways to pose questions during a meeting. Use these expressions when you need someone to clarify what they said:

- Could you repeat that, please?
- Could you go over that once more?
- Can you explain that in simpler terms?
- If you are looking for clarification, these phrases might come in handy:
- I do not see what you mean. Could you elaborate it from a different perspective?
- Can you explain this point a bit further, please?
- Just to confirm, are you referring to this [restate the point as you understand it]?

Introducing a topic

- "Thank you for getting here on time. Today we're here to discuss [name of topic]"
- "We are here to discuss [name of project] project"
- "We are going to discuss the main points of the agenda"
- "The presentation will cover these [number of points] topics"
- "Let's go over the key points on the agenda"

Concluding a presentation

- "In summary, let's review our agreements"
- "Before we conclude, let's recap the three main points"
- "To recap my presentation"
- "That concludes my presentation; thank you for your attention"

Addressing questions

When we finish a presentation we may want to ask the attendees if they need any further information

- "Any final thoughts before we adjourn?"
- "Should you have more questions or wish to delve deeper, we can chat privately or you can email me [include email on the last slide]"
- "I appreciate everyone's time today; any feedback is valuable"
- "Do we believe this is the best way forward?"
- "Are there any concerns regarding the points discussed?"

In the following article from The Independent you will read about a striking aspect of work meetings: how much time on average a worker loses on unproductive ones. The text analyses data from other countries an also what can be done so that these gatherings at work are as productive as possible

UK workers waste nearly 13 days a year in 'unproductive' meetings, poll claims

More than 60 per cent of those polled admitted they make excuses in order to avoid meetings

The average employee wastes nearly 13 working days every year – in 'unproductive' meetings, it has emerged. A European survey of 2,000 employees in the UK, France and Germany found the typical staff member spends a total of 187 hours – or the equivalent of 23 days a year – in meetings. The poll claims 56 per cent of those meetings are generally "unproductive" – and 66 per cent of those polled even admitted they make excuses in order to avoid meetings.The survey by business travel hotel brand Crowne Plaza Hotel & Resorts also found one in 10 will pretend they got the time or date wrong, and one in 20 even admitted to calling in sick to get out of a meeting entirely. Mike Greenup, vice president brand management, said: "Meetings are essential for collaboration and reaching business goals, but ensuring they are effective isn't always simple."

The poll revealed most staff think 40 minutes is the "optimum" length for an effective meeting. Interestingly, the poll found that German employees are the most likely to make excuses to skip meetings, with nearly three quarters confessing to doing so. By comparison, two-thirds of French employees and just more than half of UK professionals do the same. One reason employees excuse themselves from meetings may be due to the amount of meetings viewed as ineffective. More than one in three admit to switching off during meetings lasting too long, deeming more than half of those they attend as "unproductive". Shockingly, nearly a quarter have witnessed someone else falling asleep, and a similar number have sent personal messages during a professional gathering.

It also emerged employees are more likely to enjoy a meeting if it is held offsite and involves free food and drink. Over a third would get more enjoyment from a meeting with a relaxed atmosphere, and nearly two thirds would prefer for someone else to organise and run the meeting. Nearly two-thirds agreed mornings are generally better for meetings, with meetings between 9:30am and 11:30am revealed as the prime time for professional gatherings. The survey showed that meeting pet peeves were also universal. Respondents said the most frustrating things about meetings, were; people talking over each other, meeting rooms that are too hot or cold and people who arrive late. More than a quarter get irritated by technological issues, such as wifi or conference call connections not working.

People using "office jargon" or buzzwords was also regarded as a top meeting annoyance, with "Asap", "win-win" and "touch base" regarded as the most overused phrases.Mr Greenup added: "We know that people are looking for spaces that are more flexible, on-demand and collaborative, and the new designs we're rolling out at flagship Crowne Plaza properties in 2019 will deliver exactly that. "We have invested in Crowne Plaza to make it the first choice for modern business travellers and to help people have the most effective meetings possible." "We've created communal workspaces where guests can switch effortlessly between work and socialising and also have a dedicated onsite Meetings Directors at each property to help co-ordinate and manage meetings, taking the pain out of that process."

MEETINGS

Since the year 2000, the time dedicated to meetings has been increasing by approximately 10% annually. On average, a meeting typically lasts between 30 and 60 minutes, and individuals often partake in up to 10 meetings weekly.

A recent study conducted in the United States uncovered that employees spend an average of two hours weekly in unproductive meetings. This two-hour time investment per person each week has been valued at $400 billion annually in lost productivity.

Nonetheless, meetings play a vital role in facilitating connections among colleagues, exchanging ideas, and nurturing innovation and creativity.

To enhance meeting productivity, it is advisable to create an agenda and distribute it prior to the meeting. Setting time limits for discussions, taking notes, and establishing clear action items for subsequent follow-up are also key strategies.

Certain organizations have restricted meetings to one designated day per week. Feedback from employees suggests that many issues get resolved promptly without having to wait for the next scheduled meeting day.

Emily Johnson

Editorial Director

The Reading Gazette

456 Elm Avenue

Anytown, USA, 54321

Dear Emily Johnson,

I am writing to express my interest in the Editorial Assistant position at The Reading Gazette, as advertised. With a passion for literature and language, coupled with my experience in editorial work and content creation, I am confident in my ability to contribute effectively to your team.

Throughout my career, I have honed my skills in proofreading, copyediting, and content management, having served as an editorial intern at Literary Lighthouse and a freelance writer for several online publications. I am well-versed in AP Style and have a keen eye for detail, ensuring accuracy and consistency in all written materials.

In addition to my professional experience, I possess excellent communication and organizational skills, which are essential for coordinating with authors, managing deadlines, and maintaining editorial calendars. I am a proactive problem-solver, adept at juggling multiple tasks while maintaining a high level of quality and professionalism.

I am particularly drawn to The Reading Gazette because of its commitment to promoting literacy and celebrating diverse voices in literature. I am excited about the opportunity to contribute to your team and to help bring engaging and thought-provoking content to your readers.

Thank you for considering my application. I am looking forward to having the opportunity to discuss how my skills and experiences align with the needs of your team. Please find attached my resume for your review, and feel free to contact me at your earliest convenience to schedule an interview.

Sincerely,

John Smith

WRITING

Situation

https://www.youtube.com/embed/MNrAOR526jQ

Fernadno Braña Asensio. Adam (CC BY-NC-SA)

In the previous sections, we read and listened to what cover letters are, how they are structured or what elements should be included. In this section there is a wonderful in-depth explanation about the language and conventions that rule the writing of a cover letter. Apart from that, I will have to face some practical exercises so, it's time for me to get down to work and do some writing practice to write one, but I will need a hand. Can you help me?

Features of a cover letter

https://www.piqsels.com/en/. writing (CC0)

Below you will find a detailed explanation of how to organise a cover letter and what conventions should be used. Read the different sections carefully and then do the following exercises.

Writing a cover letter

The aim of this section is that you can understand how a cover letter is written, which pieces of information should be mentioned and most importantly how they should be written, i.e. the language that is used in them. Study the following information so you can do the activities that follow

Your contact information

Name, address, phone number, and your email address. In recent times it is common to include your LinkedIn address, in case you have an account. This way, employers can access your professional profile, resume, and networking contacts.This information is usually placed on the top right hand corner of the document, though sometimes we can see it centered.

The e-mail address should be a professional one and cutesy emails should be avoided.

- Devon-England
- (123)456 789
- professionalenglishtutor@cidead.org
- https://es.linkedin.com/in/fernandobrañaaasensio

Employer Contact Information

If the job application is being sent by email or through an employer's online application system, it will not be necessary. However, if we are using snail mail and it is written by hand we should include it. The full name and position of the addressee in the company (Director, Human Resource manager...)as well as the name and address of the company should be stated.

For instance:

- Doris Middleton
- Human Resource Manager
- The Leaping Salmon
- Horrabridge Whitchurch Road, PL20 7TP
- England

Salutations

It will depend on wheyher we have a contact person or not.However, it is advisable to do some previous research to know who we are writing to. These salutations will come in handy:

If we have a contact person

- Mr./Ms./Dr. [last name] or Mr./Ms./Dr. [first name, last name]:
- Dear Mr. Smith
- Dear Mrs. Carter
- Dear Professor Clooney
- Dear Dr. Blackwell

If we do not have a contact person:

- Dear Sir or Madam
- Dear Human resource manager
- To whom it may concern

TOP TIP: Always make an effort to find a contact name to use in your letter. The hiring manager will be able to check that you have taken the time to find and use their name. A good way to find this put is by using LinkedIn.

On some occasions, it is safer to use “Ms.” as opposed to “Mrs.,” because the latter may be offensive sometimes.

Cover Letter body

This section will allow the employer to know the position you are applying for, why you should be chosen for an interview, and the way gthat you will follow up.

- First Paragraph: Why You're Writing

In the first paragraph, you should explain why you are writing the cover letter. This is your opportunity to immediately capture the reader's attention. Provide specific details about the job you are applying for and highlight a few of your key strengths that make you a suitable candidate for the position

- Second Paragraph: What You Can Offer the Employer

In the second paragraph, focus on what you can offer to the employer. This is where you showcase examples of your past work and the results you have achieved. Utilize your main skills and experiences from your resume, but avoid simply duplicating the information. Using bullet points in this section can be highly effective in drawing the reader's attention to your accomplishments.

- Third Paragraph: Demonstrating Company Knowledge

Demonstrate your knowledge of the company in this section. Showcase that you have conducted research and understand the business, including how you can contribute to its goals and mission. This paragraph can seamlessly blend into the second paragraph where you discuss your qualifications and achievements. (Sometimes, you may choose to mention this information in the second paragraph since this should be the longest paragraph and where you have to sell yourself and the knowledge of the company)

- Fourth Paragraph: Closing Statement

In the final paragraph, summarize the value you would bring to the position. Suggest the next steps by either requesting a meeting or proposing a follow-up call. This closing section should leave a positive and lasting impression on the reader.

Closing

- Thank you for your consideration,
- Thank you,
- Regards
- Best
- Best regards
- With best regards
- Kind regards
