Welcome to Unit 4. We have come a long way so far. We are ready to talk about our skills, write a resumé and a cover letter to apply for a job. However, there are still so many things to learn that our teacher wants us to take a step beyond. Knowing how to face a job interview is key in the labour world so this is what we are going to study throughout this unit. We are going to delve into how to create a good impression, what the keys to a successful interview are, or what language is advisable, so let's get on with it!

Aims

This unit aims at producing clear and well-structured oral messages, analyzing the content of the situation and adapting to the linguistic register of the interlocutor. At the end of this unit the students will be able to interact at a job interview, adopting a level of formality appropriate to the circumstances, express and defend points of view with clarity, providing adequate explanations and argument or answer questions related to their socio-professional life.

Apart from that, the student will also be able to express conditions and express future hypotheses.

Situation

In this Use of English section we are going to deal with the expression of condition in English. It allows us to talk about hypothetical or possible situations, and to express the likelihood or possibility of something happening. By using conditional language, we can express a hypothetical situation, a possibility, a condition, a doubt, a warning or potential consequence.Let's study the following chart!

The Expression of Condition

https://www.piqsels.com. grammar (CC0)

In the following chart you will find an explanation of the expression of condition in English.

Conditional sentences are divided into two clauses: the IF-CLAUSE, which is the one that established the condition, and the MAIN CLAUSE, which is the one that establishes the result if the condition takes place. If the IF CLAUSE comes first there is a comma separating both clauses

IF-CLAUSE		MAIN CLAUSE
PRESENT SIMPLE		FUTURE SIMPLE (will+infinitive)/ (can/ may+infinitive)

If you work hard,	→	you will succeed in your career
If you attend the training sessions,	→	you'll gain valuable knowledge.
If you don't meet the deadline,	→	your project may be delayed.
If you complete the project on time,	→	we can launch the new product next month."

USES:

- The first type conditional sentences is used to express probable situations in the Present or the future time
- Sometimes, in the Main Clause, instead of WILL we find Modal Verbs like CAN or MAY, which are used to express probability or possibility

TYPE 2

IF-CLAUSE		MAIN CLAUSE
PAST SIMPLE		CONDITIONAL SIMPLE (would+infinitive)/ (could/might+infinitive)
If the company offered better benefits,	→	they would attract top talent.
If we had better communication tools,	→	collaboration would be more efficient.
If we had more resources,	→	we could expand into new markets.
If I studied business administration,	→	I might pursue a career in management.
If the economy were more stable,	→	we might consider investing in new projects.
If I were the CEO,	→	I would implement flexible working hours.
If he were more experienced,	→	he might handle the negotiations better.

USES:

- We use the second conditional to talk about hypothetical or improbable situations
- Sometimes we find COULD or MIGHT instead of WOULD
- If we have the verb "to be" in the IF-CLAUSE, it takes the form "WAS"or "WERE", being register the only difference. "WERE" for all persons (I,you,he,she,it,we,they) is more formal

TYPE 3

IF-CLAUSE		MAIN CLAUSE
PAST PERFECT (had + past participle)		CONDITIONAL PERFECT (would have+past participle) / (could, might +past participle)
If we had managed the project more efficiently,	→	we might have completed it on schedule.
If I had known about the job opening,	→	I would have applied for it.
If I had attended that conference,	→	I might have made valuable connections.
If I had received proper training,	→	I might have handled the situation differently.
If we had invested in technology earlier,	→	we might have avoided the downturn in profits.

USES:

- This type is used for past situations that are impossible to carry out (because they are past!)
- As with the other two types we sometimes find the modals "could/ might" instead of "would"

TYPE "ZERO"

IF-CLAUSE		MAIN CLAUSE
If you submit your timesheet late,	→	you receive a warning.
If the temperature in the office drops below a certain level,	→	the heating system kicks in automatically.
If an employee's computer crashes,	→	we notify it to IT support automatically.
If the company exceeds its quarterly targets,	→	employees receive a bonus.
If a customer expresses dissatisfaction ,	→	the customer service team addresses the issue immediately.

USES:

- It is used to express things that always happen. If the condition takes place, then the result is always the same. In other words this type is used to express things that are always true

MIXED TYPES

	IF- CLAUSE		MAIN CLAUSE
2nd TYPE-3rd TYPE	PAST SIMPLE If employees were better compensated,	→	CONDITIONAL PERFECT they wouldn't have left the company.
	Explanation: Second conditional in the "if" clause (hypothetical present) and third conditional in the main clause (hypothetical past).
3rd TYPE-2nd TYPE	PAST PERFECT If I had studied business management in college,	→	CONDITIONAL SIMPLE I would be running my own company by now
	Explanation: This sentence combines third conditional in the if-clause expressing the past unreal condition (not studying business management) with the second type in the main clause present unreal result (not running a company).

SUMMARY

	IF-CLAUSE		MAIN CLAUSE
TYPE1 Probable situations	PRESENT SIMPLE If you work hard,	→	FUTURE SIMPLE You will succeed in your career
TYPE 2 Hypothetical/improbable situations	PAST SIMPLE If the company offered better benefits,	→	CONDITIONAL SIMPLE they would attract top talent.
TYPE 3 Impossible/past situations	PAST PERFECT If I had known about the job opening,	→	CONDITIONAL PERFECT I would have applied for it.
TYPE ZERO Universal truths	PRESENT SIMPLE If you submit your timesheet late,	→	PRESENT SIMPLE you receive a warning.

UNLESS

Apart from "if" to introduce conditions, we have other words and expressions.

- UNLESS means "if not" and it is always accompanied by a verb in the affirmative form

  - Unless the company invests in employee training, its workforce won't be able to adapt to new technologies. (=If the company doesn't invest in employee training,...)
  - Unless the company offers competitive salaries, it will struggle to attract top talent in the industry. (= If the company doesn't offer competititve salaries, ...)
  - The project won't meet its deadline unless the team works collaboratively and efficiently. (The poject won't meet its deadline if the team doesn't work...)

SPECIFIC CONDITIONS WITH

- Sometimes we need to impose specific conditions or set limits on a situation. In these cases, conditional clauses can begin with phrases such as as long as, so long as, only if, on condition that, providing (that), provided (that).

  - As long as is more common in speaking; so long as and on condition that are more formal and more common in writing:
  - As long as the safety protocols are followed, the construction site will remain operational.
  - Provided that the sales targets are met, the sales team will be eligible for a commission.

    - The company allows remote work on condition that employees maintain regular communication with their team.
    - You're welcome to attend the conference, providing that you submit your registration form before the deadline.

OR, OTHERWISE, SUPPOSING

Sometimes we may find OR, OTHERWISE with a conditional meaning:

- "or" can indicate that one action must be taken if another action cannot be fulfilled. It's like saying, "If not this, then that.":

  - You must complete the task by Friday or inform your manager if you encounter any issues.

- "Otherwise" is used to indicate what will happen if a particular condition is not met. It implies a consequence or result of not fulfilling the condition.The speaker sets a condition:

the project proposal must be submitted by Friday. The word "otherwise" introduces the consequence of not meeting that condition:

- Please submit your report by the end of the day; otherwise, it will delay the project.
- Wear safety gear at all times; otherwise, you won't be allowed to enter the construction site.

- "Supposing" may be used with a conditional meaning. It can be used in first, second or third conditional sentences. The speaker invites the listener to imagine a situation:

  - Supposing we don't secure the contract, what's our backup plan?*
  - Supposing you miss the deadline, what consequences do you expect?*

Wish/ If only

Situation

https://www.youtube.com/embed/NXb064iS-K4

Fernando Braña Asensio. Adam (CC BY-NC-SA)

In this part of the use of english section we are going to talk about things that we would like to be different in either the present or the past. For that purpose we are going to study "wish" and "if only" . Our teacher has made a very clear explanation below, which he wants us to study, so let's go for it!

WISH / IF ONLY + PAST SIMPLE

We can use wish/if only + a past form to talk about a present situation we would like to be different.

- I wish you didn't work so far away.
- If only we knew how to do his work well.
- He wishes he could afford a holiday, but he doesn't earn enough money

WISH/IF ONLY + PAST PERFECT

In the past
We can use wish/if only + a past perfect form to talk about something we would like to change about the past.

- They wish they had finished writing the report on time. Now the boss is upset
- If only I'd studied harder when I was at school.

EXPRESSING ANNOYANCE: WISH/IF ONLY + WOULD

We can use wish + would(n't) to show that we are annoyed with what someone or something does or doesn't do. We often feel that they are unlikely or unwilling to change.

- I wish you wouldn't borrow my staff at work without asking me first. I don't like it!
- I wish it would rain. The gardener really needs some water for the office garden!
- She wishes he'd work less. They never spend any time together.

Looking at the computer screen all day wears me out; I wish my computer [ ] into pieces! And I wish my boss [ ] yelling at everyone all the time. He's always complaining an I find it so annoying! Also, I wish there [ ] someone here I could rely on, but there is no one I can talk to. I haven't made any friends. If only I [ ] some friends when I arrived here, but meeting new people is very difficult in a big city like this. I wish you [ ] nearer to me. If only I [ ] you more often!

Please write soon. I miss you all!

In the previous sections, we read and listened to what cover letters are, how they are structured or what elements should be included. In this section there is a wonderful in-depth explanation about the language and conventions that rule the writing of a cover letter. Apart from that, I will have to face some practical exercises so, it's time for me to get down to work and do some writing practice to write one, but I will need a hand. Can you help me?

A thank-you email after an interview

https://www.piqsels.com/en/. writing (CC0)

Writing an email after a job interview is crucial after the nerve wracking process of a job interview. Why is it so? On the one hand, it shows consideration towards the employer for having taken the time and effort to interview you and on the other hand, it helps you stand out as a strong candidate for the role you are applying for. You shouldn't show eagerness but it is advisable to send it within 24 hours.

Moreover, it shows professionalism and will make a great impact on the hiring team for sure.

Below you will find a detailed explanation of how to organise a cover letter and what conventions should be used. Read the different sections carefully and then do the following exercises.

Mixed-up interview

Rearrange these sentences to make a complete meaningful interview

- Interviewer: Nice. How do you manage a classroom with students who have different levels of English?
- Interviewee: I am very passionate about teaching and I think my experience and energy will be good for your school. I also love Spanish culture and I want to connect with my students and colleagues here.
- Interviewee: I give harder tasks to advanced students and easier tasks to beginners. I also use group activities so students can help each other. I make sure to give individual feedback to everyone.
- Interviewee: Yes, I have taught adults and teenagers. I like to use activities like role-playing and discussions to make classes fun. I also use videos and games to help students learn in different ways.
- Interviewer: Good approach. Can you give an example of a difficult situation in the classroom and how you solved it?
- Interviewer: Thank you for joining us today. To start, can you tell me a little about yourself and why you want to be an English teacher at our new language school in Madrid?
- Interviewer: Thank you for your answers. We will contact you soon about the next steps.
- Interviewer: It sounds like you handled that well. What do you think are the most important qualities for an English teacher?
- Interviewer: That's great to hear. Can you tell me about your teaching experience and how you make your classes interesting?
- Interviewee: I think an English teacher needs to be patient, flexible, and enthusiastic. Patience helps students feel comfortable, flexibility helps with different learning styles, and enthusiasm makes classes more fun.

Interviewee: Thank you for the opportunity. I look forward to hearing from you.

Interviewee: Once, I had a student who did not want to participate. I talked to him after class and found out he was having trouble with the lessons. I gave him extra help and he started to join in more.

Interviewer: Great points. Finally, why do you think you would be a good fit for our language school in Madrid?

Interviewee: Hello! My name is John. I love teaching English and I have a TEFL certificate. I have been teaching for one year now. I want to work in Madrid because I like Spanish culture and I think living here will help me teach better.
